THEY have a queer way of coing things in election in that country, the result of which satisnes neither party. The Republicans are disappointed because they failed to increase their majority in the Chamber of Deputies, although they still have a large majority of the members of that body. The Conservatives are not satisfied for the reason that they did not wipe out the Republican majority altogether. The vicstory of the Repullicans a now tkely to turn to another to the many attractions a read y ashes on their lips. It is thought that McMahon will prorogue the Chamber, even before the verification of the election returns, and again servative map rity by forde of arms. It looks, at this distance, as though an election in France as very much of a farce.

OUR PROSPECTS.

Never since the town of Colorado Springs was first laid out have itsprespects looked more favorable than at the present time. It is true that there have been short periods during which a greater demand for lots existed than exists now. There have! been times when a much larger number of houses were in process to erec ion than are being built now, but the houses that were run up by the score during the latter part of 1873 at 1 in '72, were in most instances small, cheap houses, costing from one aundred and fifty to five hundred dollars. Rents were high and almost every body who could horrow a little money at two per cent, a month, did so and built a house with it. A very different class of improvements is now to be made. During the past three or four weeks, particularly during the past fortnight, a brisk Gemane has existed for property n good localities, and we hear of the sale of a dozen improved projecties, and of a scire of Lits within that time, farties who have purchased the improved properties have done so in almost every case with the view of repairing them more or less ententially, while the lots are to be improved in the erection of excellent houses which are many persons now in the mable to go to tousekeeping owing many persons now in the ma or two ground wil be broken new Souses, most of them of me and sive, coming from fifteen hundred t sugar course esca. So he leaves things to earn words, and throughout las school ife, it may be, he never gets back to the thing which the word represents. What wonder that to nest a our scholars the school routine is weattsome? What wonder that the chird who entered the primary school full of caser activity, enters the grammar school with a mind as inactive as his body has become by the restraints imposed upon him? Follow the child through his grammar school course and see if his senses are sitting cown and, with his nead ouried a roused to intelligent observation. You in his hands, hemoaning his fate, as we find him, at every step, being chiled same trying circumstances, he at once teacher tasks her ingenuity to invent set about the hercu ean tast of preaking, ways of making her so notars retain the answers to certain questions till the time when those answers must be written for nese efforts. Inree of the rips are a test, then she goes on with the next month's cramming with no better end form from the vertebrae leaving the at- in view. Information thus acquired is not digested and assimilated to make part of the permanent furnishing of the mind, but is quickly removed to make room for a new set of words, having served in no degree for forming those he anima to seek the spring, where its nabits of mine at important in pursuving with profit a course of higher traina aying its thirst. In its eagerness to ing. So after ten years of school ife man is enter our might schools unable to obtain, by reading, the ideas expressed down never to rise again. Like the fair in simple, we written English, with no power to express those ideas in different words when the teacher has interpreted them, without sufficient commans of their reasoning faculties to work out by themse ies simple problems, and with powers of perception so culi as to make them very maccurate observers; they are no onger eager to earn and they co not cwel on waat is presented to them ong enough to make it their own. It should be the work of our officers of public instruction to devise means for preventing this waste of time. They must sed that in the child's first cave in school his activity is encouraged and directed and made a means of gaining knowledge. As fat as I know the Kindergarten is the only systematic arrangement for coing this. Give the child the penefit of this training at the outset, prepare him gracually for the intelligent use of books, accustom him to tak and write of what he learns, never allow the word to take the place of the object out a ways to suggest it, and _ be leve that in much ess time than is usually spert in our primary and grammar schools bupils will be prepared for a very profita) e course of higher instruction.
